METHODS ASTONISH THE OLD OPERATORS IN THAT REGION.

George A. Snow is making a fortune in oil in Indiana. According to reports from that state, the former manager of the Consolidated Implement company of Salt Lake is one of the two magnates of the field near Muncie. He and Walter I. Moody have gathered up the bulk of the productive holdings in that field and have turned them over to the Frovidence Oil company, which they

"The writer was curious to see the famous Moody and Snow, the operators whose names were on the tongue of every man in the district. In the corridor of the chief botel in Muncie he ran across both of them, and before his guide introduced him he had an opportunity to study two of the most interesting types he had met with on his trip. Despite their corduroys and high boots, they bore the marks of 'city "Of the two men Snow is the more experienced in oil lore. During the past two years he has been devoting attention to the development of oil properties throughout the country, and has made an exhaustive personal investigation of the fields in California, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Indiana. Finally he selected Delaware county in the last named state as the field for his operations.

"'What! You don't know what snake charmers are? Why, they are the fellows who warm the chairs around the chairs around the hold options on prophotels, and who hold options on property lying outside of the proven oil belt. They got hold of every new man who comes to town, and the first thing he knows he has bought something which he does not want, cannot use, and which is no good to any one.

But Moody and Snow were differ-We did not even know they were grabbed off most of the best territory. They had to pay good prices for it, but the wisdom of their course is shown today by the dividends their wells are paying."

Description of the Properties.

"Among the recent purchases of Moody and Snow in the Muncle district is the big Delaware county farm, comprising 196 acres, on which there are now eleven producing wells, the youngest of which is about a year old, and the others about five years. These wells came in at from ten to fifty barrels daily, but have since settled to their present output of about five barrels each, where it is expected they will remain for an indefinite time. To materially increase this yield it will be necessary to drill additional wells. This, it is reported, the com-pany purposes doing at once. "The famous Guthrie eighty acre farm, with its three deep or second pay wells, now producing about 300 barrels daily, adjoins the Graham-Hendrick farm on the west, while a well has been drilled and oil found on the corner of the "Graham." The wells on the Guthrie, Graham and Delaware county farms are directly in line.

"The Hanna farm, also owned by the Providence Oil company, is famous and is advantageously located. Abut-ting it on the west is property on which are eleven producing wells, all shallow drilling. Cornering it on the southeast is the Ohio Oil company's also shallow drilling. Adjoining it on the east are the two Black wells, deep drilling.

These two wells are numbered among the first deep wells drilled in the Muncie district. They are reported to have come in, one at 200 barrels, the other at 250. The method is new and is creating wide interest. Adjoiring the Hanna farm on the north deep well has recently come in at 386 barrels, and a second deep well is now being drilled. The Providence Oil being drilled. The Providence Oil company is now drilling two new wells on the Hanna farm, one on the Delaware county farm, and one on the Graham."

LETTERS FROM LONDON.—Some fifty letters from pupils or the schools of London. England, have been distributed by State Superintendent Nelson among the schools of Sak Lake and I tha counties. These, after being read, will be answered by some of the Utah pupils. The letters are mostly of a descriptive nature, covering the city of London and its schools, and the compositions are said to do much credit to the young Britons who wrote them.
